Jose Rivas walks between two rows of canes, surveying the crop that provides his family with most of its annual income.

JOSE RIVAS, SUGAR FARMER, PARAGUAY

Since joining the co-op and selling my sugar to fair traders, my family has seen lots of benefits.

I get better prices, I get paid on time now, and we have much better access to health facilities these days. We can visit the co-op's medical clinic here in town at lower cost and get test results back days sooner than we did when we had to drive into the city.

I can use the co-op's own tractor to prepare my fields and this saves a lot of time and money. I've helped my oldest son, Jose, into college where he's studying to be an agronomist.

None of this would have been possible without the support of the co-op's fair trade customers!
